Orange Wine / Skin Contact Whites

What is orange wine? Made only from white grapes; after the grapes are pressed the juice is left in contact with the skin to macerate. Seriously amazing with food.

SAVAGNIN

Vin Jaune or "Yellow wine". Aged in not completely airtight barrels where nearly 40% - of the wine evaporates over the years. No topping up is done. Drink as an aperitif or even better with hard cheese.

AUSTRIA, HUNGARY & SLOVENIA

A stellar line up in this category... if you aren't familiar with them then we would thoroughly recommend trying them. Some of Josh's favourites here.

2017 'Flora' Michael Gindl | Weinviertel, Austria £51.50
 RIESLING, GELBER MUSKATELLER, SCHEUREBE

Michael's winemaking style stands out in a region that is largely known for conventional wines. His vines grow on fertile loam and loess soil, but are planted very densely - forcing the vines to compete for nutrients and develop complex root systems. As a result, the yield is very low, and the fruit beautifully expresses the regional terroir.

 GRUNER VELTLINER

20yo vines – fresh, well balanced dry white with lovely long lasting fruit flavours. Great minerality and richness.

 GRUNER VELTLINER, WELSCHRIESLING

A complex, unusual wine with depth and body. Aromas of under ripe melon, kiwi and yeasty notes. There is a slight fizz which adds a zippy lift. The Estate is run by Eduard Tscheppe and his wife Stephanie, daughter of a 2 * restaurant owner.

2015 'Kerne and Schalen' Markus Altenburger | Burgenland, Austria £56
 TRAMINER, WELSCHRIESLING, GRUNER VELTINER, NEUBURGER

Markus Altenburger's 10 hectares of vines are planted on the slopes of the Leithaberg in Burgenland. The regional Limestone 'Leithakalk' soil produces high acid, mineral wines. The lack of nutrients in the soil force the vines to bury deeper into the ground, developing complex root systems and giving the wines their signature minerality.

Fermented on skins for depth & texture.

 SAVAGNIN

Vin Jaune or "Yellow wine". Aged in not completely airtight barrels where nearly 40% - of the wine evaporates over the years. No topping up is done. A thick layer of flor yeast develops on the surface of the wine and helps prevent excessive oxidation. This aging method, similar to that used for fino sherry allows the wine to acquire its distinct flavours, characteristic of walnut, almond, spice and apple. Drink as an aperitif or even better with hard cheese.
